Strengthening the social foundations for action

Faye Scott, senior policy adviser, Green Alliance
20th April, 2010

Why do we need a broader movement?

- To compel politicians to act
- To bring the public with us on the changes we need
- Because of climate change's wide ranging impacts

A relevant issue

- Early allies in the development movement
- Domestic impacts becoming more apparent
 - Hitting the vulnerable
 - Widening inequalities

How are groups responding?

- Different studies/projects
 - Poverty unions Social justice Trade
 - Faith Communities
 - Children Older people
 - Funders Social care
- Different narratives
 - Future caretakers
 - Just transition
 - Climate harm reduction
 - Community resilience

What does it take to engage?

- Leadership
- Thinking climate change through
- Community level support
- Push from commissioners

- All of these are building and strengthening the social foundations for action
- Different initiatives are underway
- Variety is the key
