Title: By private arrangement? safeguarding the welfare of private foster children.

Reference: Children and Society, 18(1), January 2004, pp.66-73.

Abstract: A key characteristic of debates on caring for children has been the distinction made between the public and the private or formal and informal sector of care. In particular, the impact on adult relationships of the material, emotional and moral dimensions of this division has been highlighted. What are the implications for children, however, of regarding the child care arrangements made by adults as private affairs between parent and provider? This paper reviews research on childminding registration to assess whether a similar system would regulate private fostering arrangements and thereby protect a hitherto neglected group of vulnerable children, private foster children.

Title: Involving service users and carers in social work education
ISBN: 1 904812 07 4
Abstract: This guide focuses on how service users, carers and providers of social work education and training can work together on the degree programmes. It covers the principles, practicalities and range of approaches to building and sustaining these partnerships. The key messages of the guide apply also to developing service users? and carers? involvement in all types of training for social work and social care staff and in the design and delivery of services.

No secrets: guidance on developing and implementing multi-agency policies and procedures to protect vulnerable adults from abuse

Author(s) 2000

Title: Department of Health

Abstract:

Extended abstract: Summary

Full text: This document contains guidance on developing and implementing multi agency policies and procedures to protect vulnerable adults from abuse.

Format:

Subjects:

Content 1

Context

A high priority is given by the Government to the need for action to ensure that vulnerable adults who are at risk of abuse receive protection and support, particularly in the light of a number of serious incidents in recent years.

This guidance builds on the Government's commitment to Human Rights and to protecting the rights of vulnerable people alongside the coming into force of the Human Rights Act 1998.

Leading practice - a development programme for first-line managers

Introduction

'Leading Practice' is a development programme designed for first-line managers in social care.

The programme is divided into 12 sessions, and consists of activities and discussion, as well as reading suggestions. It will aid the development of the individual and the organisation through a greater knowledge and understanding of practice-focused management.

The files on this website contain all the materials you need to successfully run an in-house training programme. These are available in the Resources area.
